Each semester we register, experiencing both a beginning and a continuation. With the prospect of new faces, new courses, new professors, the endless process of education is renewed.

The education of a student is not restricted only to the classroom. We find the here and now expressed in films and music, for our arts keep us in touch with the realities of our contemporary, moving world.

Time it was,
 And what a time it was,
 It was . . .
 A time of innocence,
 A time of confidences.
 Long ago . . . it must be . . .
 I have a photograph.
 Preserve your memories;
 They're all that's left you.

Paul Simon

The land was ours before we were the land's.
 She was our land more than a hundred years
 Before we were her people. She was ours
 In Massachusetts, in Virginia,
 But we were England's, still colonials,
 Possessing what we still were unpossessed by,
 Possessed by what we now no more possessed.
 Something we were withholding made us weak
 Until we found out that it was ourselves
 We were withholding from our land of living,
 And forthwith found salvation in surrender.
 Such as we were we gave ourselves outright
 (The deed of gift was many deeds of war)
 To the land vaguely realizing westward,
 But still unstoried, artless, unenhanced,
 Such as she was, such as she would become.

I am waiting for my case to come up
 and I am waiting for a rebirth of wonder and I am waiting for someone to really discover America and wail
 and I am waiting

 and I am waiting for the American Eagle to really spread its wings and straighten up and fly right
 and I am waiting for the Age of Anxiety to drop dead
 and I am waiting for the war to be fought which will make the world safe

 and I am waiting for the final withering away
 of all governments and I am perpetually awaiting a rebirth of wonder

On April 23, 1969, SDS occupied Maury Hall and moved GW out of a mood of lethargy into one of active controversy which lasted well into the Fall.

Following a takeover of the Administration Building at American University, GW's group moved over to Maury Hall, the Sino-Soviet Institute, to protest its research for, and consultation with, the government. Files were broken open, their contents published, and the Viet Cong Flag hung from the front of the building. The Institute's purpose, they contended, was not education, but secret research.

After an appearance by Vice President for Student Affairs William Smith, and a counter-demonstration by fraternity and more conservative students, the group of occupiers left. Damage to the building, soon to be razed by the International Monetary Fund, was estimated at $50,000. The blame, however, could not be fixed on either the radicals or opposition conservatives.

the maury hall incident

Controversy continued in the form of the trial of those involved. The first trial was protested as a "Kangaroo Court" because it was primarily administration/faculty run. Seven students were expelled and two were suspended. One student's charges were dismissed for lack of evidence. The case was appealed to the Hearing Committee on Student Affairs. This board reversed the original decisions and issued a reprimand.

october 15, the

The October 15 Moratorium brought crowds of thousands to the District of Columbia area to oppose the war in Vietnam. George Washington University provided a forum for many of the Moratorium speakers and a gathering place for the masses of protesters who descended on the area.

Representative Henry Reuss (D-Wisc.), Arthur Waskow of the Institute of Policy Studies, and Rufus "Catfish" Mayfield of Pride Inc. spoke against the war, before a march to the Selective Service Headquarters, which was led by a gruesome "guerilla theatre" war casualty and six GW students carrying a black coffin. In addition, a crowd of 4,000 gathered in the university yard to hear renowned pediatrician and anti-war spokesman Benjamin Spock. The day of peaceful protest climaxed in the evening with a candlelight march past the White House led by Coretta King, widow of the late Martin Luther King. Channing Phillips summarized the thoughts of the 35,000 demonstrators in two simple words—"Peace Now."

first moratorium

Marching nowhere in particular, with no more reasonable a purpose than a wild idea about Utopia. GW reluctantly opened its doors to this irrepressible idealism. Why were we here? Because it's not so easy to be a part of the Mainstream, for whatever reason. But that doesn't make sense; it doesn't follow the logical pattern decreed by some ghostly despot. So we're freaks—perverts. Nobody here seemed to be worried about that fact, though. We followed the directions of the marshals who acted as surrogate Justice Department officials. We listened, through tingling ears, to blank faces tell us things that we had heard at least a thousand times before. Then it was over and everyone went back to wherever it was that he came from, a little colder, a little hungrier, but no more satisfied than before and no more a part of the Mainstream than he ever was.

the advent of the academic forum

The Academic Forum emerged as the University's new publication this year following months of deliberation by the Student Assembly and the Faculty Senate. An outgrowth of Academic Chairman Bob Rosenfeld's campaign promise to supply the campus with a true "University" magazine, its purpose was to supply students, faculty, administration, and alumni alike, a forum for their various opinions on particular campus issues.

The first issue contained a cross-section of reactions to the moods and happenings of the year 1968-1969 at GW. Contributors addressed themselves to their personal reactions on what that turbulent year meant to the future of the campus. It was significant because it represented the first successful effort of students and faculty working together on an equal basis to produce a publication presenting truly divergent views.

Although the Homecoming Ball at the Sheraton Park was a financial disaster, with only 150 people paying for tickets, Winter Weekend '69 did have moments of success. The Colonials downed VMI 80-78 for their first win of the season, in the Saturday afternoon basketball game. Cheerleader Candice Williams was crowned Homecoming Queen during half-time. Phi Sigma Delta was another winner, taking first place in the ice-sculpting contest. Free rides during the contest were an immense success with area children. Both the TGIF and Saturday evening dance drew considerable numbers of students.

Dorms repeatedly made news this year for a variety of reasons. A study conducted by Vice-President Smith's office and the Plant Engineer's Department revealed that an estimated $2.4 million is needed to renovate the residence halls. Mitchell Hall ranked first with $604,500 worth of improvements required. Welling and Adams were not considered since both will stop functioning in one, or possibly two, years. Despite the value residents place on the spirit of Welling, the university feels the hall is not worth the cost of necessary repairs. Adams will be leveled to make way for a new International Monetary Fund building.

Piles being driven into the IMF site, in fact, caused some residents of Adams to believe that the dorm might come down before its scheduled time. Although several sources assured the residents that Adams was not in danger, underpinning was added to strengthen the foundations of the hall's south wall. Adams stirred even more interest when it appeared that the dorm might become coed spring semester.

The dormitory food situation also drew attention as its quality was once again emphatically questioned by Thurston residents who lined up for second and third helpings and returned them, along with the firsts, to the kitchen via the conveyer belt.

What are the answers to the problems of the residence hall? No one is saying, but productive discussion is overdue dorm difficulties

honors high pass pass fail

A new system of grading was inaugurated this year in the Columbian College and the School of Public and International Affairs which eliminated, theoretically, the quality-point-index. Terminology was altered so that grades read Honors, High Pass, Pass, and Fail. This new system was a modification of the recommendations of the Faculty Committee on Grades. On January 7, one week before finals, the Columbian faculty almost rejected the new grading system but retained it with a 41-39 vote.

Essentially, this new grading system merely represents a reshuffling of the old system, for instructors still keep records of QPI's. The more basic problem of assigning an empirical value to education has not even been attacked.

ups and downs

This year has witnessed the completion of two new buildings, a new classroom building and the University Center, for use by GW students. The new classroom building is a $4.5 million addition. It offers seminar rooms, classrooms, office space, and two lecture halls which can accommodate the many classes which have as few as 300 students. The new classroom building also offers six elevators to carry GW students to their classes in style.

GW has also lost a few buildings in the process of erecting two new ones. Maury Hall, the former Sino-Soviet Institute, has been razed by the International Monetary Fund. The block which contained such GW landmarks as Friendly's is to be used for a building which will be leased by the university to Potomac Electric Power Company immediately upon its completion. Finally, some of the G Street houses and the old American University buildings on F Street were torn down to provide space for temporary parking lots.

students vote for abolition

Neil Portnow was re-elected as President of what will be GW's last Student Assembly. Portnow ran on an "abolitionist" platform and was supported by a slate of candidates, most of whom were elected. His program called for resignation of all assembly members before March 1, 1970 with the exception of James Swartz, Academic Chairman, and the School Representatives. Swartz and these remaining members will compromise an interim body directing the development of academic councils in each school of the University. A referendum outlining this procedure was resoundingly approved by the voters.

The Presidentail campaign opened early in January with the announced candidacy of James Swartz and Stanley Grimm for President and Vice President. They withdrew from the race, however, and Swartz ran for Academic Chairman on Portnow's slate. Douglas Farmer, co-ordinator of SHARE, also made a bid for the presidency. He campaigned on a platform calling for the legal incorporation of the Assembly, to give it political and financial independence from the University. When Farmer later withdrew from the race, the issue of incorporation was taken up by another candidate, Edward Grebow, leader of Young Americans for Freedom. Portnow was also opposed by Mobe member Dan Mangold, and Corey Garber, both of whom were not in favor of abolishing the Assembly.

Although the February 11 and 12 election was a significant one affecting the future of student government, voter interest was not high. The turnout was light, with 1,478 votes cast. Below the rank of President, Assembly posts were not strongly contested. Eleven candidates ran unopposed, and there were no candidates for five positions.

The Fifth Avenue Band, with a tight, together sound began the Inaugural Concert, or Valentine Day, Massacre, February 14, 1970. The group performed only original compositions, competently handled by two strong vocalists and well-balanced instrumentalists. Many felt their performance was the more musically impressive one of the evening.

The headliners, Grand Funk Railroad, were as much a visual as an audio experience. Although some found their music uncomfortably loud, they had GW students dancing in the aisles and crowding on to the stage at the end of their performance.

the opening of the university center

"The Center is many things—a building, an organization, a service, a meeting place—but most important, the Center is YOU—a member of our University Community." So states a PR pamphlet from the University Center. A University Center has been envisioned at GW since 1931, with difficulties besetting the plan since that time. A student fee of $6 per semester was proposed to pay interest on a government loan with the final acquisition of land for the Center in 1965. The projected cost for the Center in 1967 was $7 million. This was upped to $10.6 million and finally set at $8.6 million. Construction was begun in the summer of 1967 and a bureaucracy was established to govern the Center. A new student fee of $75 per year was incorporated and this aroused much opposition to the fee itself and to the inactivity of the Resources Office of the University.

The University Center was officially dedicated on February 21, 1970, concluding a week of opening activities centered around an astrological theme. Mayor Walter Washington, who was to be the featured speaker at the dedication, did not appear. Some of the more interesting activities of opening week included an original musical presentation, "Do You Know Where Your Children Are?", lectures by John Lahr and Jack Valenti, an appearance by the Lloyd McNeill Quartet, and faculty/student luncheons.

The utilitarian and luxurious University Center offers GW students such varied services as dining halls, office space, bowling alleys, and a new theatre. These things are intended to serve student and faculty needs and perhaps they do. According to the Center's architects, the structure was designed to evoke "the feeling of mass and solidity." This solidity may, in fact, be ensconced in the minds of those who perceive the University Center as a primary need of the George Washington University.

Once more violence came to the GW campus, when demonstrators protesting the decision in the Chicago Conspiracy Trial clashed with Civil Disturbance Unit (CDU) police. A rally which began behind the library disbanded at 3:30 p.m. to move toward the Watergate, home of Attorney General John Mitchell, only to be pushed back to the GW area. Clearly over-reacting, the police arrested approximately 150 people, at least a third of which were from GW. The entry of police into Thurston and Madison Halls, besides their indiscriminate use of tear gas and clubs, greatly added to the tension and confusion. GW Vice President H. John Cantini closed the university at 7 p.m. in response to the situation.

GW will be celebrating its 150th anniversary in February, 1971, and University Historian, Dr. Elmer Kayser, has already begun preparations for the event by exhibiting early university documents, many being displayed publicly for the first time. Included among the yellowed memorabilia are notes from President John Quincy Adams requesting payments of interest on the generous loans he made to keep the university solvent. Dr. Kayser pointed out that in 1904 our name was changed from Columbian College to the George Washington University, mainly in the hope that wealthy and patriotic citizens would be inspired to contribute to the costs of the university's life and growth. Some things never change.

martha's marathon of birthday bargains

This year Martha's Marathon was one of the biggest and most spirited in its five year history at GW. Under the direction of chairwoman Cathy Bernard, the event was expanded to include not only the annual auction in the tin tabernacle, but also a mixer at the new University Center. All proceeds went to the Women's Residence Hall Scholarship Fund. Some of the prizes included lunches with Senator Hatfield, Senator Bayh, and Congressman Lowenstein, at the F Street Club. Other popular items included the privilege of throwing pies at a Slaters Manager, a real cherry tree from the Cherry Blossom Festival, interviews with Senator Goodell and Barry Goldwater, Jr., and Dustin Hoffman's tie.

sports

It starts out like any other year. The routine of early morning crew practice—the soreness. It's hard to get used to. You might even question what you're doing there. Will you be a winner?

Many teams, like baseball, had new faces and talent to look forward to. And everyone still faced the gloomy prospect of another year in the Southern Conference. But you get caught up in the maybe's of sports. Maybe we'll finally beat Maryland this year—maybe we can make the playoffs—maybe's. And looking at the past and towards the future, these maybe's don't sound that impossible any more. Slowly you pick yourself up, get that look of determination so necessary for athletes, and for the "good of the Team" decide that they need you. You're ready. The umpire, thumbs up, shouts,

"play ball"

and so you begin again . . .

and you were really pretty good . . .

now that you look back on it

Look at them. Look at their faces—their hands—the way they have of moving. And you'll have the reason behind sports at this or any other school. The feeling of winning, of being good, is almost unmatched. So amid the aches and pains and the occasional loss you find a reason for staying. And you stay to express this and yourself. As art, music, and literature are forms of expression, so are sports. It is an outlet for feeling in the most physical sense. It's rewarding, too. Not just to the individual, but to the team, the coach, and the school.

Under the watchful eyes of Coach Steve Korchek, the baseball team joined the tourist down by the White House in the spring and fall to play their home games. And with one of the strongest pitching teams in the Conference, they chalked up another winning season for the Colonials. Bunnell, Brown, Spink, Baughmann, Comitz—they're just a few names. Alone they are good ballplayers. Only together are they a team. They got it together.

basketball is a study of moves

All different. All showing the way that a particular player thinks it should be done. And in that they are all right moves. They are all good moves.

They are the moves that should have meant victory—but sometimes didn't. Many asked why. They also were the moves of a young team. A group of fine individuals just finding it hard to get the feel of playing together. They have time to grow together. And that is the most important experience in sports. Playing together. And realizing that there are times to give others a chance. There are times to pass when you might have a shot. When you pass and feel glad the point is made—not by you—just made—you are a team.

Now people are saying next year. Sure, we'll have a good year. But the Basketball team has already come of age.

There were many bright sports during the year. We found a good forward in big John Conrad. We finally realized the potential of Walt and Harold. There was the sporadic, but always exciting, Ronnie Nunn. There were shades of Bob Tallent. Lenny dancing down that court. Knorr on the floor. Mike and Ralph were always in there.

There were sad spots. The Georgetown game. The close one with West Virginia. The wobbly legs of the big men. The almost winning season. But it's okay, boys.

Closed for repairs. Repairs on a system which is finding it difficult to fit into the new education, the new movement. Closed for the repairs that the remaining Greeks want to make. Many groups had to make the choice this year. It was a hard one to make, but it revealed a strong conviction on the part of some that there was good to be salvaged from the wreck of the past year. Those that return next year will hopefully have completed the transition and be able to provide another outlet for the student. It gives them a choice. The system provides for the differences of interests that the houses represent.

If the Greek system dies here it will be a mistake. It will be the opposition who denies their opponents equal time. Freedom of choice will have been denied. If it survives it will continue to be a source of warmth and happiness, as well as a credit to the University and every student.

Dungan

At this point, sitting alone in the yearbook office at four o'clock in the morning, one week past the final deadline, there are not too many people I feel like thanking. There were those, however, who did make notable contributions. In consequence, I would like to extend my sincere appreciation to:

Jerry Lake, instructor of photography at the Corcoran School of Art, whose photographs appear on the cover and divider pages. His help in obtaining many excellent photographs done by Corcoran students was invaluable.

Michael Gilroy, publishing representative from Bradbury, Sayles, and O'Neill, for many hours of assistance when everyone else gave up and went home.

Kathy Hudak, Susan Kamil, Judy Naumann, Arthur Goldman, and Sandy Greenberg, the section editors.

Jerry Emoff, Jean Glinz, Cindy Morrissey, and Pat Parsons, who wrote most of the features section.

Bill Bogan and Becky Wharton, for their assistance with lay-outs.

John Galenski, Business Manager, and his assistant, Debby Maddock, who handled all of the Cherry Tree's financial affairs.

Peter Mikelbank, for the art work which appears in the Greek section.

James Dungan, Marv Ickow, Henry Resnikoff, and David Vita, for many photographs on very short notice.

Stevens Studios, for the senior pictures and much candid photography.

Bradbury, Sayles, O'Neill—Paragon, particularly for the helpfulness of the people in the New York office.

Sincerely,

Judith Szablak
